St. Louis, Missouri - Since 1973, Interiors In Green Inc., a local, professional plantscaping design company, has been providing design, installation, and maintenance. When the company opened its doors over thirty-two years ago, the foresight that such a strong green movement was underway absent and the business name insignificant.

It's a simple idea. Businesses ranging from corporate offices, retail stores, restaurants to hospitals include plants in their indoor environments. More and more research shows that adding plants indoors have environmental advantages. While plants help soften surroundings, the addition of plants is also a simple way to improve the quality of air by removing indoor toxins and to increase the well-being of employees and visitors by connecting to the outdoors when most of our time is spent indoors.

The team members at Interiors In Green are delighted that many businesses have already included plants in their offices. The key to selecting a professional interior plantscaping service is choosing a company that genuinely cares for the health and look of the plants in your buildings and provides excellent service including quality assurance checks and guaranteed maintenance.

“Our hope is that participants of any newly LEED certified building projects and businesses of all kinds would include plants in the grand scheme of their plans”, remarks Pam Kuhn, owner of Interiors In Green. Adding plants in green imitative efforts is the most simple and effective way of improving the air quality and quality of life in buildings.
